

FALL IS FATAL TO BROWNSTOWN LADY

Mrs. James Clements Died This Morning of Heart Trouble Due to Accident on July 16.

DEATH CAME AS A SHOCK

Injuries Were Not Regarded Serious And She Was Believed to Be Recovering.

Mrs. James Clements died at 8:30 o'clock this morning of heart trouble which was due indirectly to a fall several weeks ago in which she was quite severely injured. It was believed, however, that she was recovering and her death came as a shock to her many friends in Brownstown and Seymour.

On Tuesday, July 16, Mrs. Clements fell down a stairway at her home seriously injuring her knees. She seemed to be gaining strength rapidly each day, and Friday the casts were removed and it was believed that she would entirely recover in a short time. This morning about 8 o'clock she complained of suffering from an intense pain near her heart, and although every attention was given her, death occurred about half an hour later.

Mrs. Clements was fifty-eight years of age and had a wide circle of intimate friends. She was deeply interested in any move which meant the betterment and the uplift of the community and was known as a kind, charitable and self-sacrificing lady. She was also an earnest Christian lady having affiliated with the Presbyterian church at Brownstown during her early life and was a most conscientious Christian. She was born in Jackson county and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Phifer and always lived at Brownstown. For a number of years, she made her home with Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Matlock when they resided at that place.

Mrs. Clements is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. H. Wallace of Brownstown, one stepson and one stepdaughter. She also leaves three brothers, John, William and Harvey Phifer, three sisters, the Misses Lou and Addie Phifer, Mrs. Lizzie Lauster and six grandchildren.

The funeral services will be conducted Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. L. V. Rule, pastor of the Brownstown Presbyterian church. Burial at Fairview cemetery.

Prof. D. Batchelor of Philadelphia, who is here for a visit with his son, F. D. Batchelor, of the B. & O. S-W. division offices, will deliver a lecture tomorrow evening at the Presbyterian church on "Astronomy." He will speak about "Our Family of Worlds," giving an account of the sun and planets. Prof. Batchelor is president of the Pennsylvania Peace Society and is a well known lecturer and author.

Garriott F. Schepmann was in the city today on business. He reports that the wheat crop in his neighborhood is only fair on account of the unfavorable spring. The wheat which was sown early is better, he said, than that which was sown later in the season.

MANY VISIT THE NEW HOME OF SEYMOUR NATIONAL BANK

Customers and Patrons of Institution Inspect The New Building—Roses Given Ladies.

A large number of the friends and patrons of the Seymour National Bank visited the new building of that institution today which had been designated as guest day although the bank opened its new home Thursday. Many compliments have been passed upon the arrangement of the building and the attractive furnishings. The bank will be open until 9 o'clock tonight for the convenience of persons who desire to inspect the new building and who were unable to do so during the regular banking hours.

A number of the business houses in the city presented the bank with many beautiful bouquets and baskets of flowers. Several contributions were also received from banking houses in Bedford, New Albany and Louisville. A large number of roses were purchased by the bank and each lady visitor was presented with a flower.

The first deposit made at the bank this morning was received from a friend of the institution and amounted to $20,000.

LIFE OF SHADE TREES IS ENDANGERED BY RED SPIDER

State Entomologist Sounds Warning and Tell How Pest May Be Killed.

A warning to tree owners to be on the lookout for red spiders, which now threaten to exterminate many shade trees, has been sounded from the office of the state entomologist. Maples, elms, hackberries, ornamental shrubs and plants are the favorite eating places of the pest, and the time of year for their deadly work has arrived. The plant lice, the bane of many a lot owner, have virtually disappeared, due to the heavy rains and the unusually large number of ladybugs, but with the approaching days the red spider may be looked to to give the lot owner just as much trouble unless their depredations are stopped, the entomologist says. In a statement from the office, State Entomologist Baldwin has said:

"The red spider, so-called, is a common pest of shade trees in summer. It is also sometimes a serious pest of fruit trees and of flowers and vegetables, especially those grown under glass. On account of its minute size, it is seldom recognized until the infested plant is seriously damaged. Although called the red spider, it usually appears pale, with two black spots in its middle. The infested plants first turn pale wherever attacked by this mite, and then take on a brownish tinge.

"A number of contact insecticides may be used for controlling the pest, but of these one stands out as most efficient because it kills the eggs as well as the mites. This is the sulphur spray, which is made as follows: Mix flowers of sulphur with water, one pound of sulphur to three gallons of water, adding enough soap so the sulphur will mix readily with the water and will not precipitate. Spray this so the under sides of the leaves are coated thoroughly.

"Another remedy that is recommended where plenty of water is available is to spray or sprinkle the infested plants very thoroughly with water so the spiders are washed from the under side of the leaves. This has to be repeated two or three times a week, and of course is not so thorough as the sulphur spray."

LIFE'S DISAPPOINTMENTS

Superintendent Linke Believes That School Teachers Should Have A Rest in The Summer.

SAYS THE WORK IS STRENUOUS

Points Out That Pupil Would Be Benefitted by Full Year Term as Suggested by Greathouse.

Considerable discussion has taken place in school circles over the recent statement of Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction, advocating that public schools remain in session throughout the year without the regular vacation which is now given. The teachers are practically unanimous in their opposition to the proposed reform and many of them in Indiana are filing their protests against the adoption of any such move.

J. A. Linke, superintendent of the Seymour schools, when asked what he thought of Mr. Greathouse's statement replied, that he believed it would be a good thing for the pupils, but rather doubted if it would be advisable to require the same teachers to hold classes twelve months out of the year. He explained that teaching placed the teachers under an intense nervous strain and that they should have a vacation during the summer months whereby they can become rested after the hard year's work. When asked if a teacher's life is any more strenuous than that of a professional or business man, who is required to work long hours throughout the year

STOCK AND FIXTURES OF PEOPLE'S GROCERY SOLD

Lynn L. Bollinger Purchases The Business of W. W. Tabb and Will Take Possession Aug. 1.

Lynn L. Bollinger has purchased the People's Grocery of W. W. Tabb and will take charge of the business Aug. 1. Mr. Tabb has owned the grocery for several years and has conducted the business in a very successful way having built up a substantial first-class business.

Mr. Bollinger, the new proprietor, is not new in the grocery business having traveled for the Bollinger Wholesale Grocery Company of Louisville for several years. He is well acquainted with all departments of the business and will continue to conduct the store in first-class manner.

He is an aggressive, energetic, young business man who believes that a large and successful business can be built up only by giving his customers the best quality of goods at the most reasonable prices and by letting them know of the high grade of goods which he will carry. In a short time he will probably make some changes in the arrangement of the store and will endeavor to make the room and stock look as attractive as possible.

Mr. Tabb has not yet decided upon his future plans, but will probably not enter into active business until some time this fall.

William Hodapp presented the Republican with some fine Transparent apples this morning, which are among the finest shown in Seymour this year. The trees upon which the apples were grown were sprayed twice, once just before the leaves came out for the season and later after the buds opened. He believes that the spray had much to do with the excellent quality. Mr. Hodapp has finished picking this variety of apples and sold them at the local markets for a good price.

SHANE TO ASK LEE A FEW QUESTIONS

Wants to Know If Roosevelt Chairman Is Third Party Man For Sake of Principle Alone.

MUST MAKE SINCERITY KNOWN

Will Make Inquiry if Lee is Not Making Fight Because He Expects a Good Appointment.

Alexander Shane, of Columbus, general manager of the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern Traction Company, who was requested by Edwin M. Lee a few days ago to become chairman of the progressives in Bartholomew county, intends to write to Mr. Lee and find out just why he is taking such interest in the third party movement.

Regarding this the Columbus Republican has the following article:

Alexander Shane, who was asked by Edwin M. Lee, state chairman of the Roosevelt progressives, to be chairman of the progressives in Bartholomew county, is planning to smoke out the aforesaid Mr. Lee and make him tell just where he stands and why he stands there.

Lee importuned Mr. Shane to be county chairman, but the traction man declined the chairmanship. Mr. Shane says he is a progressive but he does not like to be an Ed Lee progressive, with Lee dictating the policy of the new party and running the machine both early and late. Following his refusal to act as county chairman, Mr. Shane received another letter from Lee in which the latter seemed

EXCISE TAX BILL PASSED BY SENATE

Would Extend Corporation Tax Law to Firms Having Income of $5,000 or More.

BORAH'S TAX BILL DEFEATED

Measure As Adopted Provides For a Nonpartisan Tariff Board—Vote Was 36-18.

Washington, July 27.—The senate, by a vote of 36 to 18, last night, passed the house excise tax bill, which would extend the corporation tax law to the business of individuals and co-partnerships and private firms on incomes in excess of $5,000. The bill, as passed, included a provision for the repeal of the Canadian reciprocity act, and a substitution of a $2 a ton rate on print paper, and a nonpartisan tariff board. Senator Borah's income tax bill was defeated.

The Republican insurgents and Democrats again united and put the measure through as they had passed the La Follette wool tariff bill the night before.

The passage of the excise bill became certain early in the day, and the Republican leaders offered little opposition to it. Senator Borah, in a fight to have his income tax bill substituted for the "tax on business," lost by a vote of 33 to 23, although he mustered to his support many of the regular Republicans, and four Democrats—Ashhurst, Culberson, Hitchcock and Martine.

The Democratic majority stood almost solidly against any change in the house bill that would threaten its defeat. They declared the "tax on business" was clearly constitutional, while an income tax law had once been held unconstitutional by the supreme court, and might again suffer that fate, until the states ratify the amendment to the federal Constitution.

On the passage of the excise bill the Democrats were supported by the following progressives and insurgent Republicans: Bourne, Bristow, Clapp, Crawford, Cummins, Gronna, Jones, Kenyon, La Follette, Nelson, Poin-dexter Townsend and Works.

The measure was changed from the original house bill only in minor particulars, except for the addition of the Canadian reciprocity repeal, and the permanent tariff commission provision. It will go back to the house for the approval of that body, and it is believed that an agreement soon will be reached so that a perfected measure can be laid before the President for his approval.

The excise measure would levy upon all persons, firms or corporations an annual tax equal to 1 per cent of net income in excess of $5,000.

At the second trial of Samuel Green son of Dan Green, upon the charge of public intoxication held in Mayor Swope's court last night, the defendant was acquitted by a jury of twelve men. This is the second trial held, at the first the jury being unable to agree. F. W. Wesner represented the defendant.

VACANCY LEAVES BUT ONE POLICEMAN ON DAY DUTY.

Retiring Officer Byrne Served From Noon to Midnight—Three Night Men On Duty.

As there are only four members of the police department since the place of night officer J. P. Byrne has been declared vacant, Chief Abell will be the only policeman on duty during the day. As the Chief is often required to take prisoners to Brownstown or is called out of the city on other business this will leave the city without protection unless arrangements can be made with the night officers to serve at such times.

When Officer Byrne was on the department his hours were from noon until midnight, but he often reported for duty at nine or ten o'clock in the morning and frequently remained at the police station until one or two o'clock the following morning. At the present time Officers Thompson and Stewart and Merchant Policeman Sensback will be on night duty.

Mr. Byrne will be missed about the police station and Chief Abell said this morning that at times it was almost impossible for one man to take care of all the business, especially when there were one or more jury trials called. Mr. Byrne has had considerable experience in police work, having been employed as a detective several years ago, and as such worked on some well known cases. It was largely through his efforts that the famous Henshaw case terminated as it did as he was one of the first men to weave the web of evidence against him. While a member of the department here he assisted in cleaning up the city of many undesirable resorts, and was instrumental in keeping the city from becoming a rendezvous of tramps. He expects to reenter into the stone business again this fall and already is considering an offer with a well known company.

SERIOUS CRASH

Wheeling Masons Precipitated to Bottom of Ravine.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 27.—Two hundred Masons attending a Masonic picnic, and their families, seated on a wooden platform covering a twenty-five-foot ravine in front of an open-air theater at Wheeling park, were badly injured when the platform broke in the center and they were violently thrown and crushed into the bottom of the V-shaped breach at the bottom of the ravine. The injured were hauled out by rescue parties with ropes.

Every person crowded on the platform listening to the lecture and speeches from the stage, went to the bottom. All were injured more or less. Numerous persons suffered broken bones, serious body injuries, cuts and gashes, although no one was killed outright in the crash.

FAVORS VACATION FOR INSTRUCTORS

with only a few days' vacation, he said that he believed that everyone should take a longer vacation than they now enjoy, but that the occupation of teaching was a great deal more strenuous than many other vocations. From the standpoint of the pupil, Prof. Linke said, the full year term would be a good thing and was of the opinion that it would be beneficial to the scholar. He pointed out that during the summer vacation the pupil pays little, if any, attention, to their school work and becomes "rusty" before the opening of the fall term. He stated that the scholar does not get well settled in the school work after a long vacation for two or three weeks after school convenes and that much of this time is practically lost.

He believed that if the classes were conducted during the summer months the children would keep in closer touch with their work and that better results would be obtained than under the present system. Prof. Linke, however, is of the opinion that the school hours during the summer months should be much shorter than during the winter period.

In speaking of the school work he said that many new things are developing in the educational field and that there would be a great change in a short time. Prof. Linke said that he believed the children were being started to school too young and that if the entrance age was seven or eight instead of six, the children would make more rapid progress in the grades, as they would be older and could better grasp the meaning of the work. He also said that there were two classes of educators at the present day, which he designated as "standpatters" and "progressives." The first class believes that Latin, algebra and other academic studies, which have so long been regarded as essential studies should be continued, as they mean a great deal for the culture of the pupil.

The "progressives" believe that vocational subjects should be included in the course and more emphasis should be given to these than to the academic studies. They declare that a course in agriculture and other trades proves helpful to the student and at the same time gives the student the same culture as does Latin, algebra and such subject.

Prof. Linke said about two-thirds of the pupils of the high school last year lived in the country and that many of them intended to follow agricultural pursuits after they completed their high school course, and if they were given scientific instructions along this line they would find their school course more helpful and beneficial. He said that a prominent educator had recently stated that education was for life and not for vacation and by introducing manual training and such courses in the public schools the student would be greatly assisted in his business career and would be better equipped to make a success of such lines and thereby his life would be more pleasant.

During the summer months mothers of young children should watch for any unnatural looseness of the bowels. When given prompt attention at this time serious trouble may be avoided. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy can always be depended upon. For sale by all dealers.

Another Long Trip.

The Blish boys—The Flander Kids made quite a remarkable run with their little touring car yesterday. They went by the way of Columbus to Nashville, Brown county, thence over to Bloomington, then down to Bedford and home by the way of Leesville, Freetown, etc., arriving here a little after supper, having gone exactly 130 miles. They visited Whitecomb Riley's summer home at the top of Bear Wallow Hill, took dinner at the "Pitman Inn," climbed the Kelly Hill, the Waterloo of many automobiles, went over the stony streets of Harrisburg, passed the beautiful grounds of our State University, through the busy streets of Oolitic, the Pittsburg of Indiana, across the beautiful Stone City down the famous Leesville hill, up the slopes of Nigger Hill and so on home. They had no accident nor "trouble" of any kind whatever.

Yesterday completed the seven weeks ownership of their car and it was on this trip that their speedometer turned its 2000 mile figure, during which long run they have had only one carburetor trouble and one puncture, which latter they themselves fixed on the road in less than 15 minutes time. This all certainly speaks careful driving on the boys' part and most efficient service and reliability on the part of the Studebaker car.

Dysentery is always serious and often a dangerous disease, but it can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has cured it even when malignant and epidemic. For sale by all dealers.

Suppose we deliver a "20" at your door TOMORROW--

Touring time is here; and you feel the urge of it.

Telephone the Studebaker dealer and have a "20" sent out tomorrow.

It will cost you $800—or $900, if it's fully equipped.

And what will you get—will you get $800 worth?

Well, we don't know of a better $800 worth in the world.

We'd say that, even if you judged it only from the standpoint of size; and good looks; and workmanship; and material; and general specifications.

But that isn't the main point.

The thing that ought to bring you to a decision to send for the "20" tomorrow is the certainty that you're not taking a chance.

It might be wise to take more time if the "20" were just a motor car.

But it's infinitely more than that it's a Studebaker motor car.

Seventy-five thousand other owners have preceded you in the Studebaker 'testing out' process.

Sixty years of faithful performance have made the Studebaker word as good as gold.

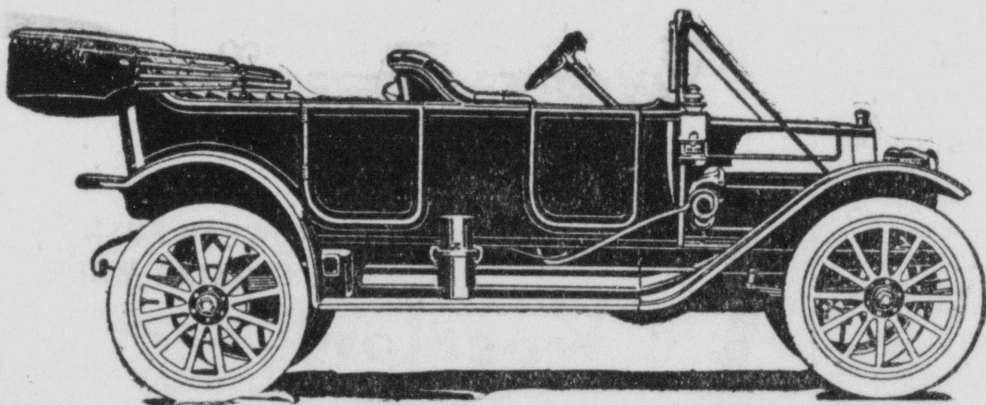

Enormous productive capacity and world-wide distribution make the price right.

Yield to that impulse to get a car at once.

You're made absolutely safe by that name Studebaker.

Telephone the Studebaker dealer.

Take the children with you when you get the first demonstration tomorrow.

SHANE TO ASK LEE

A FEW QUESTIONS

to take it for granted that Mr. Shane was on the job here and urging him to get busy with the work of organization. Mr. Shane now has another letter from Lee in which the latter says he hopes the traction man will line up with the progressives when the state convention is held. Nothing more is said about the county chairmanship, because William H. Newsom, of Sandeek township, has been named provisional county chairman.

Mr. Shane is going to write a letter to Lee and in the letter he is going to say that if Lee will come out and make a public statement that he is not seeking any political office or appointment; that he is not looking for political preferment; that he is not taking the lead in the progressive cause because he is sore at President Taft; that he is not actuated by any motives of revenge and that he is interested in the third party movement solely because he believes in the principles of the movement and not through any hope for personal gain or advancement whatever—then, and not until then, will he be able to muster any considerable support to his standard.

People here who are inclined to join with the Roosevelt forces have found Ed Lee and Albert J. Beveridge too big a dose to take. They have read the newspapers pretty carefully and they have noticed that the Lee and Beveridge forces have had considerable to say about the bosses. They do not know whether the statements made are true or not but they do know that is is poor policy for the pot to remark on the complexion of the kettle. If they know anything about the political game they know that there never was a greater boss in the state of Indiana than Albert J. Beveridge. Two years ago nearly every set of resolutions that any sort of a republican convention adopted in Indiana bore the O. K. of Beveridge. In the Fourth district the resolutions came direct from Beveridge's office, it is said, and were adopted just as he or his lieutenants had written them. The same was true in other meetings in the district and in county meetings as well. Beveridge bossed the whole ranch and gave orders like a king. Everybody bowed down and did his bidding or else got cussed for being a renegade. At that time Beveridge was talking about Mary in the vine clad cottage. He was telling husbands to go home and ask their wives how to vote. He was begging the people to vote for the interests of their fire places, grates, hot plates and other kind of fire sides. All the time he was begging for a chance to let the people rule he was the big boss, the little boss and all the intermediate side bosses. The republican organization let him play out his string and do just as he pleased. It allowed him to order workers around as if he was a ditch boss and they were hired by the day. After the votes were counted it was found that the people took so kindly to Mary of the vine clad cottage that they thought Beveridge should retire from public life and go there to live.

Beveridge was a popular man in Indiana and viewed from the outside, his battle was always for the people and against the wrongs that menace the country. He nearly always voted the way the majority of the people of Indiana wanted him to vote. He got by with his professed love for the "peepul" for quite awhile, but in the end he stumbled and fell. He was a good man and is yet, but he is made of the same kind of clay from which other politicians are fashioned, and it causes Bartholomew county republicans to smile when they read of Beveridge being one of the meek and lowly. Those who knew him knew he was a boss and there is little likelihood that his disposition has changed now.

PREPARATORY WORK.

Some of the educators who advocate the abolishment of academic studies in order that greater emphasis might be placed upon trade and manual training courses, apparently overlook the fact that the school system of the present day is preparing boys and girls for professions as well as for trades. It is well and good that such courses as manual training and similar work be made a part of the school system, but the fact must not be forgotten that our public schools prepare our boys and girls for all lines of activity, and in order that they may receive the broadest education the curriculum ought to be varied enough in order to build the foundation for any line of work.

While it is true that many of our school children are preparing themselves for agriculture and other trade vocations, it is just as true that a large percentage of them will take up lines of work wherein the academic studies are not only desirable but are an absolute necessity. A great deal has been said in recent years about school children giving special attention to such studies as will assist them in their life work and while this is a good policy, so far as it goes, it cannot be denied but that very few of the school children make their livelihood in after life by the trade or profession which they believed they would prefer while in high school. This condition will continue in future years, for a young boy or girl can never tell what circumstances will change their preliminary plans.

The object of the school course, viewed from the broadest standpoint, is to give the pupils a wide education so that they will be prepared in a meager way to make a success of whatever particular line they may later choose and specialize upon and also to give them a broad education that they may be familiar, at least in a small way, with many subjects. In this day the public schools are teaching the children who will govern the nation in years to come and who will occupy the important places in every department of political, professional and business life, and in order that this may be done to the best advantage the schools should be conducted so as to include a wide scope of educational work.

RUMOR AGAIN THAT B. & O. IS AFTER OLD WALSH ROAD.

C. T. H. & S-E. Officials Disclaim Any Knowledge of Such a Deal Being Contemplated.

A report from Terre Haute says that the B. & O. S-W. is after the C. T. H. & S-E. properties again, but the officials of that company declare that they know nothing about any contemplated deal. The report could not be substantiated at either Washington or Elkhart.

The dispatch follows: Although the official announcement is lacking and orders have not as yet been issued, it is generally believed in railroad circles that the Baltimore and Ohio railroad will soon take over the active control of the Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern railroad, known as the John R. Walsh road. Peter M. Fagan, local agent of the Southeastern line disclaims any knowledge of any such a deal pending. H. P. Radley, another official of the road in the city could not be located.

Word from Washington, Ind., is to the effect that work on the construction of a cut off along the foothills from that place to Elkhart has commenced and that the B. & O. would soon have a direct line to Chicago. At the same time the railroad management at Elkhart has given out the announcement that 200 new freight cars and five new locomotives have been ordered and that the official promulgation of the orders would be made in a few days.

SATURDAY NIGHT SERMONS

BY
REV. SAMUEL W. PURVIS, D.D.

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD.

Text, "I am the light of the world."—John viii, 12.

Light of the world! Light! Dying cry of Goethe, great German philosopher and poet, was: "More light! More light!" That's the cry of the world today. "More light" is the need of every mission field, moral reform, church, hearth and home. Light means growing grain, robust health, romping children, rustling harvest, whistling factories. Light builds cities, churches, schools and colleges. Darkness gives birth to rebellions, plucks out the stars and leaves the world to grope in despair. Darkness means ignorance, ruin, sin and death. For 4,000 years the world groaned and stumbled on in darkness until upon a night there hung in the eastern sky a star, not of first or seventh, but of immeasurable magnitude. If you would know its name you would write, not Arcturus nor Sirius nor polar star, but the Star of Bethlehem. Light terrestrial! Light celestial! Light of the world! Not light of nature, for they have that in China, India, Korea, but it brings no light to their darkened hearts. It hangs no star in the sky of their eternity. It flashes no ray through the gloom of their lives. Light of nature has brought Juggernaut to crush. Ganges to drown, swords to slay, funeral pyres to burn. From Greenland to Fiji the light of nature has left men to wallow in slime and degradation.

First Law—Reflection.

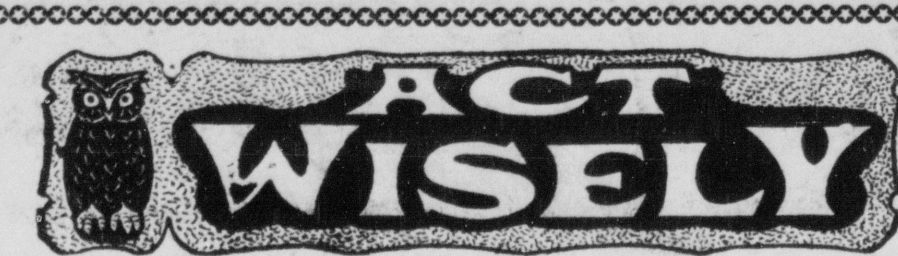

Let us step into God's laboratory to study the light of the world. The first law of light is reflection. Light strikes opaque body. Part is absorbed, part reflected. Reflection! Lighthouse, single lamp, myriad glass prism reflectors, catch one light, multiply it, magnify it, scatter it out into the darkness, until it is 500 lamps. Pulpit reflectors, sermon reflectors, catching light, multiplying, scattering into dark places. Saul of Tarsus, swift of steel, bloody of sword, official papers in pocket to slay Christians in Damascus. But the light strikes him, dazes him, surcharges him, until it reflects from his face and lips and life. Philippian jailer strikes a light and is struck by a greater one. "What shall I do to be saved?" It strikes the face of Moses on the mount and of the Nazarene on the hill of transfiguration. Reflected light! Do you see it? Strikes Richard Baxter, a cursing infidel; John Bunyan, a blaspheming tinker; Jerry MacAuley, a New York river thief; John B. Gough, a hopeless drunkard. They become flaming evangelists, lighting ten thousand back to God's sunlight. Science of reflection is called "catoptics." Beautiful science, heaven born. Christ inspired, God given. Catch the secret of the kaleidoscope? Common bits of colored glass, cheap mirrors, but catches and reflects light gloriously. Take your ordinary, common, humdrum affairs of each day's life and let Christ transform them into things of light and beauty.

Second Law—Refraction.

When light passes from one medium to another it changes its direction. Refraction is change of direction. A few years ago in a little community in Ohio was a man who was the leading sportsman and freethinker in his town. He is now the leading pastor in the leading church in the leading town of that state, whose name is well known to you. How do you account for it? The law of refraction that changes direction. The light struck him, then changed his direction from poolroom to church, from gambling den to altar. One Sunday morning in 1815 John Stewart, a worthless negro at Marietta, O., was going to Ohio river to commit suicide, passed a tent where Marcus Lindsay was preaching on the "Light of the World." The light struck this negro, changed his direction. When he came out of the tent he went not south, but north; not to suicide, but as one of the first negro missionaries of my denomination. What multitude of men once passing down through darkness to death, struck by this light, are now passing upward through light to life! The four principles of light are illumination, heat, actinism—the fructifying principle—and therapy, the curative principle—light and life, heat and health.

Follow the Gleam!

Christ is the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world. Who so followeth that light shall be saved. In 1799 a Mr. Baker and his wife were hunting in the wilds of Marion county, Ky. They wounded a deer. It ran into a hole in the side of a mountain. Mr. Baker ran after it, expecting in a few yards the hole would stop, but it opened larger and larger. Astonished at what he saw, he went out, lit a torch and, with his wife, went in. They knew it not, but they were entering the Mammoth cave. They went past stalactite and stalagmite, on and on until in bewilderment they dropped the torch. Then their condition dawned on them in that awful darkness. They crawled on hands and knees past precipices and bottomless pits for fifty-six hours without bread or water. About to give up and die, they sank down. Mrs. Baker's hand touched something damp—mud. They remembered it rained when they came in. It must be from their shoes. Mr. Baker stood on his feet. Way off in the distance was a gleam of light, a single ray, a pencil, a candle, a beam—at last sunshine, never before so glorious!

DOORS OF ASYLUM CLOSE UPON THAW

White's Slayer Is Still Insane Says Court.

White Plains, N. Y., July 27.—In the eyes of the law Harry K. Thaw is still insane and must remain in the asylum, where he was placed on Feb. 1, 1908, after he had killed Stanford White. Justice Martin J. Keogh of the supreme court has decided Thaw's application for freedom. The court took the ground that Thaw's release would be dangerous to public safety.

So far Thaw is the most expensive prisoner in the country. The amount of money spent by the state in keeping him behind the bars is estimated at $350,000. The true amount will never be known, for Thaw's lawyers spent thousands in the Tenderloin district during the first trial, when he was posing as a Sir Galahad, who avenged his wife.

The first trial cost the county $100,000. To Thaw the cost was $420,000, most of it in lawyers' fees. The second trial cost the county the same, $100,000, and Thaw about as much as the one before.

Thaw has had three hearings and has declared he will demand one every year. At the present rate, if the hearings keep up, there is no doubt Thaw will cost over a million dollars to the country and several millions to his family.

COL. WILSON SENT BACK TO ATLANTA

Government Not Pleased With Freedom Accorded Him.

New York, July 27.—The former United Wireless head, Col. C. C. Wilson, who came here from Atlanta on July 1 with Keeper Shea of the federal penitentiary to testify in the United Wireless bankruptcy proceedings and who has spent part of the time boarding with Keeper Shea's sister in the Bronx, was separated from Shea yesterday afternoon and later headed for his old cell in Atlanta in the custody of two deputy United States marshals, who had orders to deliver Wilson to Warden Moyer of the prison with all possible speed.

This move followed an order from Attorney General Wickersham in Washington. Before this order was received it was planned to keep Wilson here with his keeper until next Wednesday, at which time the grand jury inquiry was to be concluded. While Wilson had been examined at length, it was planned to call him again after Keeper Shea had been questioned, and it was not thought that the inquiry could be finished until next Wednesday.

Keeper Shea followed the deputies and their prisoner to Jersey City to see the colonel off for Atlanta.

He felt a sharp substance in the wound and was much surprised when he pulled out a fish bone a quarter of an inch long. McKenzie swallowed the bone five months ago while eating fish.

No Washington.

Apropos of Washington's birthday George M. Cohan, the comedian, said at a dinner at the Players' club in New York:

"All actors, alas, have not the veracity of George Washington. I know an actor—and his name isn't Washington—who was so hard up during the zero weather of last month that he came near suiciding.

"But just when the poor fellow was at his gloomiest, his wife came and showed him a savings book containing a credit balance of four figures.

"Why—why, darling," cried the actor, "where on earth did you—how did you possibly manage to accumulate all this?"

"He took her in his arms and kissed her. Then, when he let her go, she smiled and said:

"I accumulated it, dear, by putting away a dime every night you told me a fib about where you'd been so late."

BRIBERY SCANDAL AT DETROIT

By Exposure of Fourteen Aldermen and Secretary of Council in That City, Charged With Dickerings For the Grant of a Valuable Right to Wabash Railway, Another Chapter Has Been Added to Shame of Cities.

Detroit, Mich., July 27.—A bribery scandal that has broken out in this city has involved fourteen aldermen and the secretary of the common council committees. Seven have been arrested already and the others are now being sought by the police. The men now under arrest are Thomas E. Glinnan, president of the council; Aldermen Louis Brozo, Frank Mason, Algie Deime, Joseph L. Thiesen and Martin Ostrowski and E. R. Schreiter, secretary of the council committees. Glinnan and Schreiter made full confessions soon after being arrested and Glinnan turned over to detectives who arrested him a roll of $1,000 in bills which he had received but a few minutes before.

Heid Out for Money.

The charge against the aldermen and secretary is taking money in granting the Wabash railroad the right to build a freight warehouse on Seventh street between Fourth and Congress. The franchise was favored by the board of commissioners and others, but was held up by certain aldermen who demanded pay before voting for it.

To catch these aldermen, Andrew Green, Jr., hired Burns detectives, who set a trap for them, under an understanding with Attorney General Kuhn and Prosecutor Shepherd. The amount paid, it is said, was $3,700, ranging from $100 to some of the aldermen, to $500 to Schreiter and $1,000 to Glinnan. The detectives posed as agents for the Wabash and opened offices in the Ford building, where the money was paid. Eight of the aldermen got theirs Thursday, the others coming in yesterday.

Used a Dictograph.

The plan laid was to get all the other aldermen to take the money first, then have Glinnan and Schreiter come last. Glinnan fixed a date of 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he would come after his, the plan being to arrest him and hold him in another room until Schreiter, who was to come at 7:30, got his. The Burns men used a dictograph on Alderman Glinnan and have a record of his entire conversation with them. Glinnan had the money on his person when arrested. Schreiter was grabbed in his office in the city hall.

A SCAPEGOAT

That is What Kid McCoy's Wife Says of His Arrest.

London, July 27.—A man who is described on police records as "Arthur McCoy, alias Kid McCoy, aged forty-two, an American subject," was arrested here on an extradition warrant charging complicity in the recent $80,000 jewel theft from the Princess of Thurn and Taxis. He is held at Bow street awaiting the arrival of the Belgian police. When arrested the prisoner said he knew nothing about the theft. He was remanded without bail, but has not been extradited. The Oxford police have in custody Arthur Kemp, known as "Squeaker," a race-track operator, and two Russians, father and son, who are charged with being the actual robbers. The Belgian authorities have no trace of the stolen jewels, but contend that they were taken to London, they believe, by McCoy and a male companion, who has not yet been arrested.

So far as can be learned the police evidence against the American consists of the coincidences that McCoy stopped at the hotel at Ostend where the robbery occurred and that he was friendly with Kemp. McCoy's latest wife, who did not accompany him to Ostend, visited Scotland Yard and protested against his arrest, declaring that he was innocent of any connection with the robbery. She said: "My husband is simply the victim of an unfortunate acquaintance. I think other people are trying to make him a scapegoat."

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

SAVING ONE'S OWN.

At the risk of his life a father named William Burns saved a child from drowning. He did not know whose child it was.

Half a dozen children were playing by the side of a canal as Mr. Burns drove by. Suddenly there were screams, and little hands pointed to the water. Jumping into the canal, Burns encountered a swift current caused by a nearby sluiceway. By great exertion he reached the drowning child and brought it ashore.

"My God, it's my boy!" exclaimed Burns.

You say the conjunction of the man's heroism and the rescue of his own flesh and blood were a mere coincidence.

Perhaps, but the moral remains. He who saves the child of his day or generation may be saving his own child.

When a father insists as a patron of the public school upon proper lighting and ventilation and reasonable school hours he may be saving his own child from contagion or illness.

When he demands an atmosphere of moral purity in and about the premises of the schoolhouse he may be saving his own boy or girl from the taint of impurity.

When he declares that the saloon keeper must obey the law respecting the sale of intoxicants to minors and takes the personal pains to see that the law is observed he may be saving his son from drunkenness.

When he helps to create a public sentiment that prohibits gambling he may be saving his boy from temptation.

And so on.

Fathers should realize that the interests of the child are inextricably bound up with the interests of the community. Communal concern is concern for the individual.

The weal or woe of the child is largely dependent upon the disposition and willingness of fathers to plunge into the waters to save a child, no matter whose child it may be.

If in the sequel it should turn out that the willing citizen has saved his own flesh and blood thrice blessed is he. No man liveth to himself.

We are all tied up together in the public concern, and there is no way to undo the tangle.

The only thing to do is to jump in when the occasion shows itself and save the child—anybody's child.

WALDO SAYS HE WAS SLANDERED

Police Commissioner Sues New York Newspapers.

WANTS $250,000 FROM EACH

Declaring That Statements Published by the Herald, Tribune and Press Purporting to Be Grand Jury Testimony and Placing by Implication Upon Him Responsibility for Continued Gambling Were False, Police Head Demands Damages.

New York, July 27.—Police Commissioner Waldo announces that as a result of the publication in the Herald, the Tribune and the Press of statements alleged to have been made by Lieutenant Daniel Costigan before the grand jury, he has instructed his counsel to bring suit against each of these newspapers for $250,000 on the ground that the statements purporting to have been grand jury testimony were false and libelous.

The substance of the statements of which the commissioner complained was that Lieutenant Costigan, head of one of the three gambling detail squads that Mr. Waldo employs in the Tenderloin and elsewhere, placed upon the commissioner himself the responsibility for the continuance of gambling and that he had given information to the commissioner as to gambling houses and that the commissioner had done nothing. Waldo sent for Lieutenant Costigan, who denied that he had said anything of the sort before the grand jury.

MORE ARRESTS

The Rosenthal Case is in a Fair Way to Be Cleared Up.

New York, July 27.—Just before they got into Shapiro's gray car and sped out of Forty-third street Louis (Bridgie) Webber was with the murderers of Herman Rosenthal. That was the statement made before Coroner Feinberg by Louis Krese, a waiter, a new witness, who singled out Webber in the courtroom and then pointed to Jack Sullivan as another man who was in front of the Metropole at the time of the shooting. Sullivan as well as Webber is now charged with murder.

The unexpected identification made by Krese was perhaps the most dramatic feature of a day that was crowded with interesting developments in the Rosenthal case and matters which have arisen on account of it. Mayor Gaynor, replying to a letter from Commissioner Waldo asking what should be done about suspending Lieutenant Becker, sent a long letter to Commissioner Waldo in which he directed that Becker should not be suspended until evidence against him was produced. At the same time the mayor in characteristic style discounted the clamor over the Rosenthal case and gave Mr. Waldo the highest of praise for his conduct of the police department.

Frank Crofici, who, the police contend, is the Dago Frank that took part in the murder and who was arrested with a young woman named Rose Harris, and with Abraham Lewis, was held on a charge of murder, while the Harris woman and Abe Lewis were held as material witnesses. Both the district attorney and Deputy Commissioner Dougherty were active in examining witnesses and both announced that definite progress had been made. District Attorney Whitman conferred with the lawyers for Jack Rose, Sam Paul, Shapiro and Libby and Bridgie Webber, and intimated that the prospect of more revelations favorable to the clearing up of the case was good.

From police headquarters came the word that detectives have picked up the trail of the men now at liberty who are wanted for the murder—Harry Horowitz, Whitey Lewis, Lefty Louie and Sam Schepps.

AN INCOME TAX

Senate Passes House Excise Measure After Long Debate.

Washington, July 27.—The senate after about eight hours' consideration of the house excise bill, passed that measure by a vote of 37 to 18. The bill extends the special corporation tax that was a feature of the Payne-Aldrich law to individuals and copartnerships.

It is an income tax in disguise and levies 1 per cent rate now imposed on corporations on all incomes from other business in excess of $5,000. The word business includes all professional and other activities yielding an income. Senator Borah brought forward an income tax bill which he offered as a substitute for the excise measure, but the substitute was voted down by 33 to 23.

$44,592 Misapportioned.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 27.—The report of state accountants places the amount of misapportionment of school funds to townships including Harrison, in which this city is situated, and others contiguous to it, at $44,592. The examiners went back to 1890. The city school trustees will try to recover back to 1904. There is no accusation of graft or wrong doing. The taxes were simply apportioned to the townships and should have gone to the city.

BRISK CONTEST NOW PROMISED

Much Interest In Coming Republican Convention.

MANY SEEK TO HEAD TICKET

For Gubernatorial Nomination There Are Practically a Dozen "Hats in the Ring," and the Lists Not Yet Closed —For Other Places on the Ticket Those Who Ran Two Years Ago Probably Will Be Renominated.

Indianapolis, July 27.—Candidates for Republican nominations for state offices are becoming numerous, and indications are that by the time of the Republican state convention, Aug. 6, there will be a full field.

For governor there are practically a dozen candidates whose names will go before the convention. They are David W. Henry, Terre Haute; W. W. Parsons, Terre Haute; W. T. Durbin, Anderson; Lew Shank, Indianapolis; George B. Lockwood, Marion; Walter Olds, Fort Wayne; Charles Arthur Carlisle, South Bend; James Wade Emison, Vincennes; Addison C. Harris, Indianapolis; L. C. Embree, Princeton.

Friends of Hugh H. Miller also will make a strong endeavor to have him consent to place his name before the convention. It is said also that W. L. Taylor's name may come before the convention.

For lieutenant governor Sidney K. Ganiard of Lagrange is said to be the leading candidate. Mr. Ganiard was a member of the Indiana state senate in 1905-07. Edward W. Wickey of East Chicago also is a candidate for the nomination for lieutenant governor. He made his announcement several months ago, and has been making an active canvass. Mr. Wickey is a lawyer and served in the legislature of 1909 as representative from Lake county.

For the other places on the Republican state ticket there is a general disposition to give the nominations to the men who were the nominees two years ago, as follows: John E. Reed, Indianapolis, auditor of state; Jonce Monahan, Orleans, treasurer of state; Otis Gulley, Danville, secretary of state; J. L. Peetz, Indianapolis, state statistician; Samuel C. Ferrell, Shelbyville, superintendent of public instruction; Finley P. Mount, Crawfordsville, attorney general.

Woodfin D. Robinson, former judge of the appellate court, is mentioned for the nomination for judge of the supreme court from the First judicial district, and Leander J. Monks, now on the supreme court bench, is a candidate for renomination. David A. Myers is a candidate for renomination for judge of the appellate court.

Former Congressman Frederick Landis of Logansport will deliver the "keynote" speech at the state convention of the Roosevelt new party at Indianapolis next Thursday.

A CLOSE CALL

Mother and Five Children Caught on Railway Trestle.

Marion, Ind., July 27.—When Mrs. D. A. Barley and five small children were caught on a high trestle in front of a fast moving freight train on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad, only heroic and quick action saved them from being ground to pieces. Paul Barley, ten years old, may die of his injuries. He crouched between the ties and the train passed over him. The fingers of his right hand were cut off and he suffered scalp wounds and was picked up unconscious. Doctors say the chances for recovery are slight.

Mrs. Barley and the children were walking the trestle opposite East Eighth street, in Jonesboro, when the train bore down upon them. Seizing two little girls, Mrs. Barley threw them from the trestle, and with a baby six months old and a child three years old in her arms, she jumped a distance of fifteen feet to the bottom of a ravine. Mrs. Barley suffered a broken leg at the ankle and the four children were cut and bruised, but will recover.

Fatal Explosion in Mine.

Linton, Ind., July 27.—An explosion of gas at the Monon Coal company's mine resulted in John Moran, Frank Byers and William Haines being seriously burned. It is probable they will die. The noise of the explosion was heard some distance from the mine and the first investigation showed that great damage had been done to the mine. The cause of the explosion has not been determined.

Wilson Will Attend Marshall Meeting. Sea Girt, N. J., July 27.—Governor Wilson will go to Indianapolis about the third week in August to attend the notification of Governor Marshall as candidate for vice president. The exact day has not been fixed, but it will be a week or ten days after his own notification.

Representative William A. Rodenberg of Illinois delivered a speech in the house against Woodrow Wilson, in which he described Dr. Wilson as an "anti-Jeffersonian, anti-foreign, anti-labor and pro-Chinese candidate" for the presidency.

MISS ELEANOR P. WILSON.

Youngest Daughter of the Democratic Presidential Candidate.

MACHINE GUN BLOWN TO PIECES BY MINERS

Ten Men Killed in Battle in Paint Creek Valley.

Charleston, W. Va., July 27.—In a battle near Mucklow seven guards and three miners were killed. The miners, a hundred or more in number and heavily armed, swooped down on a squad of Baldwin detectives guarding a mine with a machine gun. The machine gun was blown to pieces with dynamite. E. W. Ganjot, one of the most noted man hunters of the mountains was among those killed.

Following this battle Governor Glasscock telegraphed to Major James I. Pratt at Mount Gretna, Pa., maneuver camp to proceed with his battalion to Paint Creek.

The situation in both Paint Creek and Peytoni districts is exceedingly serious, and it is feared there will be wholesale killing before the strike trouble is over. The miners under arms are said to number hundreds.

WIFE WAS IN WAY

Wealthy Real Estate Man Charged With Murder Conspiracy.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 27.—While a detective and a shorthand reporter were concealed behind a curtain in the home of Mrs. John Bell, a negress, Simon P. Kuhn, a wealthy real estate dealer, signed a written contract with Belle Mitchell, a creole, to murder his wife within twenty-four hours for a consideration of $100. Kuhn is in jail charged with conspiracy to murder. Kuhn is said to be infatuated with another woman and is said to have tried every possible means to get rid of his wife. He kept consulting the Mitchell woman, who is a clairvoyant, and it is said he urged her so often to take the job the negress became frightened and confided the whole matter to the police.

DEMOCRATS DIVIDED

House Split Into Two Camps on the Naval Program.

Washington, July 27.—About thirty-five Democratic members of the house have determined to bolt if the Democratic party caucus continues to hold out against additions to the battleship fleet. Indications are that the caucus will be reassembled and another effort made to force the adoption of a resolution declaring for the incorporation in this year's naval bill of an authorization for at least one dreadnought.

The house Democrats are badly split over the naval program and the leaders are attempting to restore order.

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio. — "Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief." — Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBERRY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now. CARDUI WORKED LIKE A CHARM

After Operation Failed to Help, Cardui Worked Like a Charm.

Jonesville, S. C.—"I suffered with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. J. S. Kendrick, in a letter from this place, "and at times, I could not bear to stand on my feet. The doctor said I would never be any better, and that I would have to have an operation, or I would have a cancer.

I went to the hospital, and they operated on me, but I got no better. They said medicines would do me no good, and I thought I would have to die.

At last I tried Cardui, and began to improve, so I continued using it. Now, I am well, and can do my own work. I don't feel any pains.

Cardui worked like a charm." There must be merit in this purely vegetable, tonic remedy, for women—Cardui—for it has been in successful use for more than 50 years, for the treatment of womanly weakness and disease.

Please try it, for your troubles.

CHAPTER XXX.

A Sound Afar.

About midway in the curve of one of the numerous bays, marking the coastline, and several hours distant from the Mount, stands a stone cross erected by an English marauder to indicate the place of his landing. The symbol is visible on all sides from afar, for before it are the sands and the sea, and behind stretches the land barren of wood—low, level, covered only with marsh grass. Toward this monument of man's conquest—most prominent object in a prospect, dreary and monotonous—rode, late one afternoon, a band of horsemen. At their head galloped my lord, the Marquis; in the center could be seen a man with bound arms whose horse was led by one of the others. This person—a prisoner, thin, haggard, yet still muscular of frame—from time to time gazed about; a look of inquiry or calculation in the black undaunted eyes.

"What prison are you taking me to now?" once he asked the trooper who held the reins of his horse. "And why do you go in this direction? Is it you dare not ride along main highways on account of the people?"

"Never you mind!" came the gruff answer. "And as for the people, they'd better look out!"

"Bah!" laughed the prisoner. "You can put some of them in cells, but not all!"

"There may be something worse than a cell waiting for you!" was the malicious retort.

"No doubt!" said the other stoically. But as his eyes again swept the horizon, from the opposite direction appeared another band of riders. At first the prisoner, regarding them, looked puzzled; then as the newcomers rode straight and rapidly on toward the cross, his countenance expressed a faint understanding. A fresh relay of men, he concluded; one his present guard would consign him to, and then themselves return to the Mount. Still was the meeting place an odd one, and the demeanor of the two bodies of men not entirely consistent with his conclusions; for, as they drew nearer, both parties slackened their pace, suspiciously to scrutinize each other.

"Twenty—the number agreed upon!" muttered the Marquis, and spurring on fast, led his troops nearer the cross.

Not many paces distant the word was given to halt, and, as they obeyed, on the other side of the monument the strange men likewise drew rein. At the same moment, there flashed on the captive's mind a discovery. These faces, looking so grimly out over the marshy field at them, were not the wooden visages of paid soldiers, but of men he knew—his men! Across the space separating the two parties he could read their quick looks—their satisfaction—their complacency! He watched them with eyes in which pride and tenderness mingled. And then, for the first time, did he observe they had brought some one with them—a woman, or a girl—the Governor's daughter!

The bold black eyes of the prisoner regarded her fixedly. What did it mean? said his keen gaze. Colorless as marble, my lady held herself very erect on her horse; then while his glance yet probed her, the proud face slowly changed; on the cold cheek youth's bright banner flared high. The young man turned; following the direction of her gaze, looked at the Marquis; my lord's features radiated felicitations; his eyes shone with welcome. And a fuller understanding came over the prisoner; in some mysterious manner had the Lady Elise been made captive, and now had the nobleman come to escort his betrothed back to the palace.

Even as the Black Seigneur reached this conclusion, he became cognizant his bonds had been loosened; the reins placed in his hands. "You are free," said a voice and mechanically he rode toward his comrades.

Thus, near the crumbling and time-worn cross, was the exchange of prisoners effected; the girl whirled away by my lord, who seemed fearful of treachery, and the Black Seigneur left to the greeting of his men.

"Now, by the tuncful Nine!"—the poet, Gabriel Gabarie, pushing his burly form to the front, was the first to extend a hand—"but, from your looks, the Governor looks ill to the welfare of his lodgers!"

"And had we not captured my lady," spoke up another, gazing after the party of the Marquis, "he would have looked yet worse to the welfare of one of them, no doubt!"

"Drink this, Seigneur," cried a third; "you must drink this—a special bottle we brought for the occasion!"

"Sent by old Pierre when he heard we were coming for you!" added the poet. "Your drinking-cup, lads! Unfasten the skin for yourselves! To mon capitaine!"

Once, twice, deeply they drank—

oast and vintage alike to their taste; then straightening, looked at the Black Seigneur whose eyes yet burned in the direction my lady had gone. With a start he seemed to recall himself to the demands of the moment; his first questions they expected; the ship—where did she lie? Snug and trim in a neighboring cove, ready to slip out, if occasion required and danger pressed—which contingency they did not just then expect, since at the moment was his Excellency more concerned with affairs on the land than matters pertaining to the sea. What these paramount interests were, the young man, on whose thin cheek now burned a little color, did not at once ask; only gazed inquiringly over the group, where one, whom he might have expected, was absent.

"Sanchez—he is not with you?" A look of constraint appeared for an instant on the poet's face.

"No, he's with the people, I expect. You see," he went on, "things have been happening since you elected to enact the mountebank. The bees have been busy, and this little hive they call France is now full of bother and bustle. The bees that work have been buzzing about those that don't; they made a great noise at Versailles, but the King Drone only listened; did not try to stop it, fearing their sting. They hummed at the door of the Bastille, until the parasite bees, not liking the music, opened the doors, let them all in—"

"The Bastille has fallen?" The listener's voice rang out; his eyes, searching sharply the features of the bard, seemed to demand only the truth, plain, unadorned.

"It has," answered the other gravely. "And the tune sung in and around Paris has kept on spreading until now it is everywhere! You may hear it in the woods; along the marshes; out over the strand! The very Mount, immovable, seems to listen. When will the storm break? Today? Tomorrow? It needs but a word from Paris, and then—"

The poet broke off, and silently the Black Seigneur seemed to be weighing the purport of the news; for some moments stood as a man deep in thought; then, arousing himself, spoke a few words, and gave a brief order. Swiftly the riders swept away in the direction from which they had come, and only when they had gone some distance did the young man once more turn to the poet with a question.

Whereupon the latter, spurring his horse nearer his chief, launched into eloquent explanation.

"And then," ended the bard, "the Governor's daughter walked into our ambush as unsuspecting as a mouse into a trap!"

"The Governor's daughter cozened by Nanette!"

"That she was! A clever wench and a brave one, Nanette! Although," the poet's jovial eyes studied the dark face, "unless I am mistaken, she found the task to her liking!"

"You treated her, the Governor's daughter, well?" said the other abruptly.

"Gave her your cabin, mon capitaine, where," chuckling, "she ruled like a despot. Not once did she whimper, or beg favor—for herself! For the Marquis, it is true, she did plead—that day we took them!"

"He's her betrothed!" said the young man shortly.

"A marionette!" glibed the poet. "Some of the men were for making short shrift of him, and they might have—only for her!"

"They will soon be safe enough together now!" remarked the Black Seigneur.

Again a peculiar, half-questioning expression shaded the poet's eyes, while furtively he regarded the young man.

"Yes, they ought to be!"

"The terms of exchange—what were they?"

"You for her! That was our demand. After the place had been agreed upon, his Excellency asked to name the hour, and further interjected a condition, binding both parties to secrecy in the matter, that the people might not know. They acted badly when the soldiers returned to the Mount without his daughter; they might behave worse, no doubt he thinks, when they come back with her."

"So will she be safely returned in the darkness! A wise provision!"

"That," murmured the poet, studying the horizon, "was evidently his thought. But," as the Black Seigneur, relaxing his pace, drew rein at a fork in the pathway, "yonder lies our cove, mon capitaine, and—"

"Do you and the men go there!" commanded the other, and gave a few further instructions.

"See that the ship is kept in readiness!" he ended. "As for me—" He made a vague gesture.

That evening found the Black Seigneur in the Desaurat forest; where, as a boy, he had fled for shelter, now some instinct, or desire he did not strive to analyze, drew him. As slowly he made his way through the wood, on every hand familiar outlines and details, seen vaguely in the last light of day, invited him to pause; but without stopping he moved on to the castle, and up to the chamber, where Sanchez, returning from America, had found him, a vagabond lad. Through the window the same unobstructed view of the Mount dimly unfolded itself in the dusk, and for some moments he regarded it—august, majestic; gossamer its heart's black secrets with specious and well-composed bearing! As he looked, there suddenly came to him the remembrance of another impression; the same picture, seen through the eyes of a boy—standing where he was now! Then had the Mount seemed a marvelous series of structures, air-drawn, magical—home of a small and fairy-like creature, with hair of shining gold. Dusk turned to night; in the distance the Mount vanished, and through the break in the forest only the stars twinkled.

Then lighting his fire, the young man sat down at the side; with faculties alert, listened to the wind; looked at the flames. Demon-like they leaped before his eyes, as when he had waited and watched for the emissaries of his Excellency; and mechanically he placed his weapons on the same spot he had been wont to lay them in those days. There was little likelihood they would seek him now, however; the Governor was fully occupied elsewhere, looking to interests more important to himself and to—

Her ladyship! the fire leaped wildly, as laughing at fate's foolish prank. Her life for his! What irony! If she had betrayed him? "If?" His laugh crushed possibility for supposition; but almost at once itself died away! Indissolubly associated with the thought, a scene in a dungeon must needs recur; her denials; the touch of a hand; the appeal of light fingers thrust through the bars! Why? The questions he had asked then, were reiterated now; the hand that had gripped hers opened, closed; once more he seemed to see the steadfast, unswerving eyes; once more seemed to read in their depths, "Believe!"

The pine branches continued to crackle as with merriment; but his gaze was somber. How glad she must have been to see the end of her captivity! The sudden leaping of yonder flame was like the quick, bright flash that had mantled her cheek at sight of her liege lord to be! They should have arrived at the Mount ere now; about this time were entering the gates! He could see her, the Marquis at her side—

A sudden sharp detonation afar dissipated the picture. Other explosions followed, like volleys of muskets; and, springing to the window, the Black Seigneur looked toward the Mount; from it, flashes of light gleamed and glimmered. Then the loud report of a cannon reverberated in the distance.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Attack on the Mount.

The rock loomed black before them, as the troopers, escorting the Governor's daughter, rode up to the Mount. Entering the town, at its base, dark walls on either side of them shut out the broad map of the heavens and left but a narrow open space above; few lights were visible, so that many of the houses seemed tenantless; even at the tavern, unwonted stillness prevailed. Apparently was the return well-timed; in twisting street and tortuous byway, where hostile faces had been prone to frown upon the soldiers of his Excellency, emerging from, or ascending to, the stronghold of the summit, now only chill drafts of air swept down to greet them; passed on with shrill whisperings, and died away in the distance.

Nearing the massive portals that opened wide into his Excellency's realm, my lady suppressed a shiver; but the Marquis, in a low tone, ventured to jest on the depressing and melancholy aspect of the Mount at that hour. To these light remarks she returned no answer, and he had just begun to rally her on a certain quietness of spirits, apparent on the beach and irreconcilable with the circumstances of the moment, when a sharp exclamation fell from the girl's lips.

In front of them, between the soldiers and the entrance to that upper part of the Mount, many dark forms had suddenly darted forth; at the same time from near-by houses came unmistakable sounds of life and activity; doors were thrown open and windows raised. The town they thought asleep had merely been watching; now showed its bright eyes in a multitude of menacing lights around them; below, where likewise a mysterious marshaling had occurred, from alleys, corners, and hovels, immediately after the passing of the Governor's party!

"What does it mean?" Again she heard the Marquis' tones, less confident now, as he turned to the commandant.

"Treachery!" The commandant's voice rang out. "They've broken faith with us!"

"Dogs!" My lord gazed uncertainly ahead; dubiously behind. "What are we going to do?"

"Do!" The commandant suppressed an imprecation. "Push on to the upper gates!"

"To the gates!" cried the Marquis; then wheeled quickly. "But you—Elise!"

"Never mind me!" she returned, with steady lips and eyes.

There was no time for further words; a sharp order from the commandant and the troopers spurred forward toward the entrance in the wall and those whose purpose it was to oppose them.

What happened thereafter the girl was but vaguely cognizant of; reports of guns, flashing of steel surrounded her; the clattering of hoofs mingled with the loud shouts of men.

"The Bastille of the North! Down with it!"

This was their battle-cry; on every side she heard it, though hardly realizing the purport of the words; confused, she listened to her father's name—her own—banded about. She wondered why those on the wall, the soldiers within, did not fire and repel all these people.

Then almost at once came the answer. The troopers' comrades were mixed in the melee without; she and they, too—so adroitly had the moment for striking been planned—might be swept down in the volleys from the ramparts. A cannon boomed above; but its deafening reverberations were answered only with laughter and jeers—Mon dieu! Did his Excellency think to frighten them with sound, as if they were timid children fleeing from thunder? Was his Excellency aiming at stars?

And again that cry: "The Bastille of the North! We, too, will take our Bastille!"—dominated the clashing of arms and the tumult of strife.

For what seemed an interminable period, the Governor's daughter saw, through flashes of light, men struggling, striking; then launched suddenly forward, by an irresistible movement of the horses, found herself within the gates. The Marquis who had early been separated from her in the strife, was nowhere in sight. Behind now sounded the fray; a short distance from the wall, and she looked back; fiercer than ever, soldiers and people contended within the entrance; beneath the portals. As she strove to restrain her horse she heard the voice of her father.

"Mon pere! Mon pere!" she cried eagerly, divining his face in the light of lamps on that side of the wall. He answered only with a laconic command to go at once to the palace; and, regarding his features, tragically appealing to her at the moment—so strange and different they seemed!—she prepared to obey. But ere turning: "You think the soldiers can hold the gate?" she asked.

"Yes; yes!" he replied sharply, as if annoyed at the question.

"But if—"

"There is no 'if'!" said the Governor, and as the girl rode away, his look, hard, steady, shifting to the soldiers, made quick mental note; they were holding the gates. Satisfied with the front his men presented, and, delivering a few brief orders to the commandant whose valor in rallying his forces had been commendable, his Excellency walked toward the great stairway leading up to the open space near the church. Arrived at this high point from which the town unfolded itself in the starlight and flicker of lamps, he sought, as best he might, to acquaint himself further with the situation; to judge the numbers of the assailants and the extent of their preparations.

The scene that met his eyes was not so reassuring as he had expected; that which until now he had considered but a spasmodic outbreak of a comparatively few townspeople, excited by the news of the Bastille and bent on any petty mischief, resolved itself into more than an orderless, desultory uprising. To his startled gaze the rock, like an ant-hill disturbed, seemed swarming with life. Even as he peered down, new relays of men poured upward from the dark byways to the reinforcement of those already gathered at the portals, and, for the first time, his confidence, bred of contempt for the commonality, became slightly shaken. Fate, which had struck him sharply in the capture of his daughter and the enforced negotiations leading to the release of one he would have dealt with after his own fashion,

"They Will Not Spare You!"

now gripped him closer. What did it portend? Whence came all these people?

Not all of them from the immediate neighborhood! Voices, among the assailants, had called out in what was surely the Parisian dialect of the rabble; here to propagate the revolution; extend the circle of flame! And they had seen that arms were not wanting! Muskets, pikes, swords, must have been kept concealed for some time in the town at the base of the Mount or on the shore. In his mind's eye, too late perhaps, his Excellency could see now how the assault had long been planned, how all these people had only been waiting. For what? The opportunity afforded by a treacherous word! Spoken by whom?

But a moment these reflections surged through his brain; an instant, and his gaze swung around, at towers—turrets—as a magician might apprehensively survey a fabulous architectural creation, handwork of his dark craft, threatened, through an influence beyond his control, with destruction; then with a quick start, his Excellency wheeled; walked toward the stairway. About to descend, the sight of a figure coming up, caused him, however, to pause; in the flare of the light below, something in the manner of the man's advance impressed the governor as peculiar.

The movements of this person, who was under-sized, wiry, were agile and cat-like; first would he stop, look around him and listen; afterward spring forward a few steps as not quite sure of his course. But still he came on, keeping as closely as might be to the cover of the shadows, until a growing impression he had seen the fellow before resolved itself into positiveness in his Excellency's mind. And with the conviction and a sudden remembrance of the place and the character of their previous meeting, a definite disinclination to encountering the figure on the stairs caused the Governor abruptly to draw into the entrance of the church. There, concealed, impatiently he waited for the man to pass on, thus affording him the opportunity to slip by and return to the gate.

Meanwhile, the Lady Elise had repaired to the palace; a prey to harassing doubts her father's words had failed to remove, she listened to those sounds of the strife she no longer saw. But that she wished to obey her father unquestioningly now—at, perhaps, a supreme moment for both of them!—she could not have remained where she was. Never had the palace looked so blank and deserted; she rang her bell; no one answered. The servants had apparently all left—gone, it might be, to look down on and behold this guerre a la mort waged near the gates. Or, perhaps, had they all, except the old nurse, fled from the palace, never to return?

As she asked herself these questions, in the distance the noise of the conflict grew louder; the shouts of the people more distinct, nearer! With a sudden premonition of disaster close at hand, the desire to see what was happening—to know the worst—seized her. No longer could she remain in her apartments; she must return to the ramparts—to her father; and then if need be—The thought drove some of the color from her cheek, but in a moment her braver instincts spoke; there awoke within her the courage and spirit of her Norman ancestry.

Pale, yet determined, she hastened down the long, dimly lighted corridor, and was nearing the door leading to the street when it suddenly opened and a man, tall and dark, showing in his appearance many signs of the fray, stepped in. At sight of her a quick exclamation fell from his lips; his bold, anxious eyes lighted. "My Lady!"

"You!" Her startled glance met his. "I heard the firing; hastened to the Mount—here! I trust not too late!"

"Too late!" she repeated wildly. "Where else should the Black Seigneur be than here, at the Mount—at such a moment!"

"True!" he returned quietly. "Where else?"

She noted not the accent; behind him, through the open space a bright fork of flame, in the direction of the soldiers' barracks, shot into the air, and, at the same time, she saw that the officers' quarters and out-buildings glowed red. The knowledge of what it meant—that her apprehensions had been realized, sent a shudder through her, and quickly as the door closed.

"Pardon, my Lady! In a moment they will be here, and they will not spare you! Your father is not at the gate; he left before the soldiers gave way! Believe me, or not—it is the truth! As true as that, if you go out, they will kill you!"

And did he not want that; why else was he here? The young man's face darkened; he made an impatient gesture. They were but wasting time; already were the people close without; one of the assailants, a woman, had been shot in the assault; the others? Her Ladyship would understand; if she wished to save herself? His tones vibrated with strange eagerness. The palace had a rear entrance, of course? Then had they better flee upward to some place of concealment, and, later when the people were concerned most in pillage, endeavor to find a way to leave the Mount. After that, it would be easy; his ship was waiting—Her wild words interrupted; her father—she would go only to him! She would never leave him now!

That which she proposed was impossible, quickly the young man answered. The mob—the terrible mob! Did she realize to what she would expose herself? Did she know the terrible danger? More plainly he told her. As for her going, it was not to be thought of; he must see she did not persist in her purpose.

"You?" My lady flashed him a glance. "You!" she repeated. "Whose men broke faith—"

"That may be!" His voice rang bitterly. "Yet," with stubborn resolution, "your Ladyship must not go!"

"Must not! And you presume—dare tell me that! You, the—"

"I would there were no need to cross you, my Lady," he returned, when behind him the door, leading from the street, suddenly opened; closed.

"Elise!" The voice of the Marquis, who had hurriedly entered, rang out; changed. "Mon dieu! What is this?" In the dim light, an instant my lord stared hard at the man before him; then with drawn blade threw himself upon him.

ANNA BELLE VISITS GRANDPA'S

Dear Friends:—You may know that I have enjoyed the past week when I tell you that it was spent with grandpa and grandma. Isn't it fun to go down on the farm and spend a few days? And my grandpa and grandma both seem so young, for they always say that children will be children and tell us to enjoy ourselves all we can, just so we do not get into any mischief. Grandpa gave me the cutest little pet, and says that when it can leave its mother he will send it to me. Of course, you can see that it is a little calf. I always gather the eggs and help grandma all I can and then, too, I like to watch the farmhands feed the cattle and horses, don't you? I am showing you the clothes I wore while at grandpa's and also the ones he wears when he goes out to look after things. You know my grandpa is a great hand for seeing that everything about the farm is done right. Grandma says she thinks he is too particular, but I think he is the dandiest grandpa in the whole world, and of course, you think the same of yours. Listen, I have some very interesting SEWING SOCIETY news to tell you next week—no, not this time, because I haven't the space in this letter—and I hope it will meet with your approval. How did you like our camping outfit? Now I must close with love to each one. Please write as soon as you can and tell me what you're doing these hot days. Address me care this paper. Lovingly,

Anna Belle

What have I made for my new dolly?

THIS LITTLE GIRL'S NAME IS DOROTHY. SHE HAS JUST MADE SOME NICE THINGS FOR HER NEW DOLLY AND SHE WANTS YOU TO FIND OUT WHAT THEY ARE. TO DO SO TAKE YOUR PENCIL AND TRACE OUT THE DIFFERENT ARTICLES BY THE AID OF THE DOTTED LINES. YOU WILL NOTICE THAT THE PETTICOAT AND HAT SHOWN TO THE LEFT ARE VERY EASY, BUT AS YOU GO FARTHER TOWARD THE RIGHT YOU'LL FIND THE GARMENTS ARE MORE DIFFICULT TO DISCERN. THERE ARE FIVE ARTICLES SHOWN. TEST YOUR DRAWING ABILITY AND SEE HOW EASILY IT IS DONE.
